Albertus Oak is not having a good day. He's just demolished the wall of an eight-hundred year old church with a runaway pumpkin, his love life is in the doldrums, and his neighbours are turning up dead.

As a dryad he should have no problem managing the apple harvest, after all he can talk to plants. But all is not what it seems at Edge Farm. A cast of unlikely suspects are competing to discover the recipe for the world's most famous cider, and it appears that at least one of them is willing to kill for it.

Once again Albertus must join forces with Lupin the Werewolf Chef, his psychic sister Bella Lestrade and Lorna Brimtide the London Witch to solve a brain-scratching mystery.

(This paranormal cozy can be read as a standalone mystery or as the second book in the Albertus Oak Mystery series)
