A near complete record of the original squadron emblems of the 15th Air Force from WWII. The official record of emblems was muddled and recorded incorrectly after WWII. But now, with the effort of several researchers and an artist, all but a few of the original designs have been located. Family members of the squadron members have been contacted and photos of their original jacket patches were collected. Then the art has been recreated in full color as accurately as possible and organized into their original order of battle. This makes a great reference guide for collectors and history buffs.
