Summer of 2006. Life was good, life was full. Our children, ages four, six, eight, and ten, busy with the summer bliss of no school, no schedule, pool, and popsicles. My husband Vernon, busy with summer landscaping, came home one day in July with a persistent pain. We were not folks to run to doctors on a whim, but morning left us no option. Life as we knew it ended that day. This book contains the journal entries I kept for the next year and a half. While some minimal editing has been done, most was left as I wrote it. There has been no hindsight applied, no rewriting with what was later learned. And nothing was written with the knowledge of what the future held. Although my aim was to be completely honest, out of respect for Vernon and my children I left some things unsaid. Living with a suffering person requires a special kind of grace and God was always faithful.
