The Principal as Curriculum Leader: Shaping What Is Taught and Tested

Now in its fourth edition, this best seller has helped successive cohorts of principals create the best possible curriculum. The authors examine four levels of curriculum – state, district, school, and classroom – to explain how effective principals influence curriculum at every stage.

The authors re-examine the key issues that continue to influence principals in the "real world", and include examples of ways principals can incorporate curriculum leadership into their organizational behaviour. This book will guide principals in working with teachers to generate meaningful curricula which will raise the level of learning – and teaching – in your school.
