This is a concise, step by step guide to starting a medical transport company. The need for transportation for the chronically ill will continue to rise as the baby boomers age. Because of medical advances, people are living longer. Though it is good that people are living longer, a lot of those people that would have naturally died without medical intervention are often times chronically ill. A good example of someone who requires transportation is a patient that needs to get the the dialysis clinic two to three times a week in addition to getting to doctor appointments.
